My group plans a trip every fall. The exact dates change based on weather + vacation time. Pay close attention to #6 above... why would you close one area to create a higher usage/impact in another? Usage should be spread out to decrease impact.

Affidavit on Rubicon Trail Use*March 23, 2009*Page 2 of 2

I have made at least one trip a year through the Rubicon trail since 2003. There have been some years when I have made two trips or one full trip and one or two partial trips. I am avid off-road recreationalist who will continue to use whatever trails remain open at about the same frequencies. Since the Rubicon Trail is an existing trail that has been in use for many years and sees a considerable amount of traffic each year, it seems ridiculous that we would consider closing it which would substantially increase the use of surrounding trails which could be much more susceptible to environmental damage than the Rubicon. I off-road recreate in the Sierras an average of about three weeks per year and plan to continue doing so in the future. Hopefully, there will be some trails left for people such as myself to enjoy the natural beauty of the mountains and the forests.
